When friends move away, it is hard for them to leave and even harder to watch them go. Toby's best friend moved yesterday, and now all Toby has is his friend's baseball glove (which smells like Parmesan cheese). Toby is bored and alone. But then the snow starts to fall, and Toby finds an unexpected flurry of friends . . . With humor and warmth, Julie Halpern and Matthew Cordell tell the story of one little boy who learns about friendship, change, and the nature of the snowflake.
