Untold Stories is an attempt by African media scholars to fill the void created by the dearth of research and publications on emerging areas of African journalism. This scarcity makes it difficult for students of African media to fully appreciate how African media organizations and journalists have covered the continent's protracted economic crises, reform programs, governance issues, and the current push towards globalization. Untold Stories captures major developments in economics and business journalism in Africa, and provides a framework for research in this field. Each article is accompanied by responses from practicing journalists across the continent, which focus the more philosophical discussions on very functional issues.
