Though management expert Margaret J. Wheatley works with a broad variety of clients, from Fortune 100 CEOs to ministers, she points out that they all struggle to maintain integrity, humanity, and effectiveness in a relentlessly fast-paced, technology-driven world. Credited with establishing a fundamentally new approach to leadership based on living systems theory, or, as she puts it, "how Life organizes", Wheatley shares her first-ever compendium of essays about her real-world experiences helping clients introduce more authentic, life-affirming practices into their organizations. Essays cover a wide scope of topics including leadership strategies, raising children in turbulent times, and the role of communities in the lives of organizations. "Finding Our Way" is filled with practical advice on applying the ideas in Wheatley's groundbreaking books and has particular relevance for managers and leaders who are trying to run their organizations in more progressive, egalitarian, and effective ways.

书评

看完这本文集，我有了动手翻译的冲动：作者的很多观点都引起了我的反思和共鸣，为我们检讨目前的机构管理和领导力文化提供了一个更广阔、更人文、更美好的视角和可

能性。
看这本书的时候，自己正在参加周期为半年多的黄埔公益领导力协力营的培训。作为一个刚刚开始自己创办公益...
