As National Public Radio's Much-Loved and respected senior foreign correspondent, Anne Garrels has covered conflicts in Chechnya, Bosnia, Kosovo, Afghanistan, and Iraq. In Naked in Baghdad she reveals how as one of only sixteen non-embedded journalists who stayed in the now-legendary Palestine Hotel throughout the American invasion she managed to deliver the most immediate, insightful, and independent reports with unparalleled vividness and immediacy. Her evolving relationship with her Iraqi driver/minder, Amer, and the wonderful e-mail bulletins sent to friends by her husband, Vint Lawrence, counterpoint the daily events of her life in Baghdad, and result in a deeply moving and intimate portrait by one of our bravest and most enlightening news reporters.

给人以身临其境的感觉，读完以后唯一的遗憾是书太短了

She sounds pretentious to me. A journalist's point of view, not very insightful, situational awareness doesn't extend very far. She even admitted her purview herself. Do admire her courage and determination tho
