Lisa Phillips loved public radio so much that after graduating from college, she took a job as News Director of KTPR in rural Fort Dodge, Iowa. Her day started at 4:30 a.m., in time to broadcast Bob Edwards' s first "Good Morning" on Morning Edition. Over a decade later and still a devoted public radio fan, Phillips was driven to know more about the people who deliver the news, the conversation and the diverse programs that she and millions of others enjoy every day. The result is Public Radio: Behind the Voices, a collection of personal stories from more than 40 of the most listened to voices in public radio. We join Lisa Phillips as she talks to Cokie Roberts, Nina Totenberg and Linda Wertheimer about the long standing professional and personal connection they share. We accompany her as she visits the home of legendary Daniel Schorr, shares lunch with Michael Feldman, has a cozy conversation with Marian McPartland and a coast-to-coast phone call with Renée Montagne. Through personal interviews and in-depth research, Phillips allows us to get to know these and many other popular figures of public radio by letting them speak for themselves – about their lives, loves and professional journeys inside and outside of radio. As Phillips writes in her introduction, these public radio hosts are "with us when we get up in the morning, when we drive to work, when we cook dinner, garden, sit in the bathtub. But they are veiled by the invisibility, the inherent modesty, of radio. We delight each time that veil is briefly lifted." Public Radio: Behind the Voices lifts the veil and deepens our appreciation for the voices – and the people – who bring us the world through our radio every day.
