This volume presents Barbara Hannah's Jung Institute lectures of 1954-58. In these profound talks, she spoke on the archetypal symbolism of seven animals, building on her earlier 'Cat, Dog, and Horse' lectures. Here, she adds her work on the serpent, lion, bull, and cow and discusses the images of all seven animals and their roles in the psychological and cultural life of the West, clarifying, deepening, and expanding her earlier work, while also synthesizing her various introductions to the topic.
