Full-color, extensively labeled diagrammatic art shows every part of the human body: bones, muscles, organs, brain, and nervous system. Illustrations are full-page size and easy to understand, making this book an ideal supplement to high school biology texts as well as a handy home reference. An introductory section illustrates cells and cell structure. Other main sections illustrate the skeletal system, digestive system, muscles, respiratory system, the brain and nervous system, the sense organs, and the reproductive organs. An alphabetical index refers the reader to an illustration for every anatomical part.
