This book collects some 200 urban legends from around the world, such as "The Mutilated Shopper", "The Devil at the Disco," and "The Thug in the Back Seat." Each includes an introductory discussion of the legend and its presence in popular culture, the text of the legend, suggestions for further reading, and cross-references to similar tales. The volume closes with a selected, general bibliography and a detailed index. Readers of this volume will see how these legends offer a reflection of contemporary culture, while they will also enjoy browsing them and learning more about their background and significance.
