The college application process is complicated, and most students need all the help they can get. If you’re wondering how to figure out what you really love to do, how to translate your interests into meaningful extra-curricular activities, and how doing this will help you enjoy yourself during the stressful college admissions season, then this is the book for you. The Road to College will show you how to prepare for college applications by starting early, learning what you love, and pursuing your unique interests.

The Road to College explains how high school students can pursue their individual passions in a variety of areas: the arts, sports, community service, government, the sciences, and more. It provides the practical advice you need to make the most of your high school experience and to prepare for life after high school.
