Grand National series is challenging, unique, and thoroughly baffling to outsiders. To have any chance whatsoever of becoming Number 1, a rider must be so rounded that over a single season he must be able to find his way around dirt tracks of four varying lengths, shapes, and speeds, plus paved road circuits like Daytona. Not only must contestants be able to dictate their demands to what amounts to five different dirt and road model motorcycles, but these bikes, though finely tuned, cannot be one-off factory specials, but supposedly based around stock machines, the type of Harley-Davidsons, Hondas, Kawasakis, Yamahas that anyone may buy.
