This technohistory, a genre invented by the author, is the history of the production and use of the famous Zero fighter aircraft, the finest "dogfighter" in the air for most of World War II. Written with an eye to detail and to poignant moments in the Zero's history, the narrative presents World War II from the Japanese point of view. Ultimately more than the history of an airplane - though the Zero is presented with due respect - this book offers a presentation of the Japanese character and world view.
