Freud asked the question. "What does a woman want?" Beverly Rollwagen supplies the answer in the form of a collection of poems, each focused on a single image, desire or concept. Her single image, desire or concept. Her phrases are concise, but her thoughts take us in unexpected directions, turning conventional experiences and interests into puzzling and delightful conundrums. Crush. Famous. Lazy. Secret. Perfect. Spinning. Rollwagen explores the lexicon of desire with a calm and understated brilliance, and the result is that most uncommon phenomenon: a poetics of the everyday that's both light and satisfying. As Natalie Goldberg, author of Writing Down the Bones, puts it, "Rollwagen's work is alive, fresh, dynamic--funny Also heart-stopping deep and very original. I want all my students reading it."
