This 174-page anthology includes short stories, free verse, ghost tales, fictional memoir and three one-act plays, written by seventeen promising Brooklyn authors in their 20's. In his endorsement of the work, Harold Augenbraum, Executive Director of the National Book Awards, writes: "In controlled, surprisingly adept prose, poetry and dramatic dialogue, these young writers convey wonder and emotion in equal parts, the confusion of youth past to the musings of early adulthood. And as Brooklyn quickly becomes the literary capital of America, with this two-volume collection they have inserted themselves into a grand tradition."
