Thirty-year-old Chantell Meyers works to build her relationship with God after almost losing her father to death. She promises God that if He allows her father to live, she will become a better person. But although she wants to keep that promise, her life becomes more and more complicated as she faces a series of trials, temptations, revelations, and therapy. From her decision to stop having sex until she gets married, to her boyfriend's response - he two-times her - being a better person isn't as easy to stick to as Chantell thought it would be but ultimately, by relinquishing her desire to 'have it all', she finally gets everything she's ever wanted.
