Jack has had a crappy couple of months and wants to get away and try to put his life back together when the bottom falls out of his plans. He wakes up one morning in the Sierra Mountains of California to see the countryside burning. Forced out of his retreat, he is left in a world where seemingly everyone has vanished, and towns and cities have been destroyed by fire. So begins his journey to find others, but in the process, he finds more than he bargained for, especially when he meets Bud, the dog that is much more than a dog. There is a great evil rising up since the world has been altered, and it is Jack's mission to find other survivors and start a new life in what is left of the world, even if it costs them their very souls to do it.
