Baltimore police receive and urgent call out to Glendale High after gunshots are heard coming from a locked girls' toilet. It appears that three girls are in there but only one, Joise, is conscious. She assures the police through the locked door that she's not the shooter. She also insists that she cannot manage to unlock the door from the inside because of the injury she has suffered to her leg. After an janitor is summoned, the police cautiously enter the bathroom. They find three victims - Joise, who leg wound seems relatively superficial; Perri, who is unconscious from a bullet wound that has ripped through her jaw; and Katrina, who is dead, shot in the chest. The investigating team is led by Detective Harold Lenhardt - himself the father of adolescent girl. He soon develops information that is at odds with the story Josie is telling. While it seems likely that Perri brought the gun to school, the rest of Josie's story is not supported by physical evidence. What's more, other clues at the scene suggest there was a fourth girl who witnessed the entire episode from behind a locked stall. Where is she now? How did she get out? Some years before the fatal shooting in the locked room, growing up. As ever, she ratchets up the suspense as she unfolds her story with grace, sympathy and acute intelligence.
