

How Theology Shaped Twentieth-Century Philosophy

How Theology Shaped Twentieth-Century Philosophy 下载链接1

著者:Frank B. Farrell

出版者:Cambridge University Press (April 30, 2019)

出版时间:2019-4-30

装帧:Hardcover

isbn:9781108491716

Medieval theology had an important influence on later philosophy which is visible in the empiricisms of Russell, Carnap, and Quine. Other thinkers, including McDowell, Kripke, and Dennett, show how we can overcome the distorting effects of that theological ecosystem on our accounts of the nature of reality and our relationship to it. In a different philosophical tradition, Hegel uses a secularized version of Christianity to argue for a kind of human knowledge that overcomes the influences of late-medieval voluntarism, and some twentieth-century thinkers, including Benjamin and Derrida, instead defend a Jewish-influenced notion of the religious sublime. Frank B. Farrell analyzes and connects philosophers of different eras and traditions to show that modern philosophy has developed its practices on a terrain marked out by earlier theological and religious ideas, and considers how different philosophers have both embraced, and tried to escape from, those deep-seated patterns of thought.

作者介绍:

Frank B. Farrell is Emeritus Professor of Philosophy at Purchase College, State University of New York. His publications include Subjectivity, Realism, and Postmodernism: The Recovery of the World in Recent Philosophy (Cambridge, 1994) and Why Does Literature Matter? (2004).

目录: Introduction - The Thinning Out of the World 1
Chapter 1 - Empiricism and Theology 20
Chapter 2 - John McDowell: Rejecting the Defensive Move Inward 70
Chapter 3 - Aristotle Redivivus: On Saul Kripke 90
Chapter 4 - Hegel, Theology, and Pippin’ s Reading of Hegel 115
Chapter 5 - Walter Benjamin: Incarnation or Radical Incommensurability? 142
Chapter 6 - Rolling Back the Protestant Reformation: Wittgenstein and Dennett 165
Chapter 7 - McDowell (II): Active and Passive Faculties and the Theological Framework 188
Chapter 8 - Derrida, the Religion of the Sublime, and the Messianic 210
Chapter 9 - Literature Today and the Sublime Absence of Aesthetic Experience 228
Chapter 10 - Where Do We Go from Here? 246
Index 258
• • • • • (收起)

How Theology Shaped Twentieth-Century Philosophy_ 下载链接1_

标签

theology

philosophy,

评论

How Theology Shaped Twentieth-Century Philosophy_ 下载链接1_

书评

How Theology Shaped Twentieth-Century Philosophy_ 下载链接1_