Poetry with Pleasure grows out of the involvement of English teachers of the Centinela Valley Union High School District, Hawthorne, California, in curriculum development and change. Dissatisfied with the usual treatment and selection of poetry in standard anthologies, teachers taught and tested a number of poems in the classroom. And the poems in this book have been found by the authors and their colleagues to be valuable for reflective thinking, for developing symbol systems and conceptual abilities, for bettering student attitudes toward poetry, for demonstrating the values of poetry, and for developing sensitivity.
