Book Description Documented by a teen for teens, these revealing accounts of 15 young adults struggling under difficult circumstances serve as an excellent resource for parents, teachers, counselors, and, most important, teens themselves. Professional commentary and an interactive questionnaire follow each profile, giving readers an opportunity to respond to the complex issues and situations that trouble, puzzle, and frustrate their peers. Touching on such topics as friendship, trust, respect, and understanding, this guide helps young people make the transition into adulthood. About the Author Mallory Stuchin is a student at Horace Mann High School in New York City. At 16, she has worked for Glamour magazine, and her work has also appeared in the New York Observer.
