it be fun if all the castles in the air which >e could come true¼ and we could live inthem?" asks Little Women's Jo March.\"You'd have nothing but horses¼ inkstands¼ and novelsin yours¼" says her sister Meg.\"Wouldn't it¼ though? I'd have a stable full of Arabiansteeds¼ rooms piled with books¼ and I'd write of a magicinkstand¼ so that my works should be ... famous Iwant to do something splendid before I go into mycastle¼ J something heroic or wonderful¼ that won't beforgotten after I'm dead. I don't know what¼ but I'm onthe watch for it¼ and mean to astonish you all¼ some day.I think I shall write books¼ and get rich and famous: thatwould suit me¼ so that is my favorite dream.\> And that is just what Louisa May Alcott did when she
