One
 I knew I shouldn t laugh. I was in enough trouble already. But it was awfully hard not to.
 Dad told me¼œ when he saw me outside in the pouring rain before he called tttts h~t~g f~mil~y conference¼œ \"Alexandra Warner¼œ this is no laughing matter. We trusted you to take care of Meg! There s nothing funny about this.\" And so here we all were gathered around the kitchen table. Mom and Dad were sitting next to each other¼œ both of them still wearing their office clothes¼œ and Daddy hadn t even taken off his raincoat. They were also wearing those superserious looks they get at these family >conferences. My brother¼œ Mark¼œ Mr. Perfect¼œ was slouched in a chair¼œ looking bored. And I was standing at the end of the table with my
