Weekend at Camp David
General Colin Powell looked on as William Jefferson Clinton was sworn in to be America's forty-second president. January 20, 1993 was a bitterly cold morning in Washington. The crowd watched shivering as one generation of leaders left the White House to be replaced by a younger one. Between the two administrations and two generations stood Colin Powell. Dignitaries sat in the reviewing stand waiting for the arrival of the new First Family. Among them Colin Powell, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, sat with his wife beside him looking ahead with a solemn gaze.
1971. Powell earns a master's degree in business administration at George Washington University, Washington, D.C.
1972. Powell is named a White House Fellow.
1973. Lieutenant Colonel Powell sent on duty in Korea.
