 1 t was the very best time of day in the Hundred-Acre Woodi¼E which is the same as saying it was the very beginning of the dayi¼E when the sun was \"ust easing itself up over the horizon. It was the Jtime when a certain bear of very little brain typically rolled out of bed to celebrate the new morning with a very large breakfast.
 But this wasn't to be a typical morning at Winnie the Pooh's house. Instead of the friendly rattle of honeypots and hungry smacking noisesi¼E the only sound to be ~-d was a longi¼E shivering sighi¼E followed immediately by a most forlorn \"Oh bother.\" Pooh was sitting on the edge of his bedi¼E swinging his feet aimlessly and looking terribly sad. He looked as if not even the thought of breakfast would cheer him up. In fact when the thought of his favorite time of day for a small smackeral of something sweet to eat did occur to him he wrinkled up his forehead even more and swung his feet around a bit more nervously and said very loudly \"Oh ~ ~ ~ ~.4 ~ ~ ~ ~~
