This Seventh Day sequel has Ronald Malcolm (Condor) returning to the field (from grad school) when an Air Force intelligence officer is assassinated in the middle of a missile site in northern Montana. Having been reactivated by the CIA to serve as a decoy, the birdbrained tyro is kidnapped by Chinese agents who utilize him to locate a treacherous KGB foe. Meanwhile, the Soviets are sacrificing one of their own GRU agents in order to divert attention from their covert operation Gamayun. The Shadow stands for surveillance and obfuscation and this is all too circuitous.
