Since moving to Santa Barbara in the Summer of 1969, only a few things have changed. The most significant being that the freeway traffic lights were finally removed and the waterfront was given a facelift with palms, parks and hotels.

The Painted Cave Fire of 1990 burned from the top of the mountain all the way to the sea. It destroyed clusters of cozy wooden neighborhoods that were rebuilt into up-scale stucco and tile. Many of the stores on the main street continually change their appearance; some for a new purpose and some for the sake of a face lift.
