Once this began to dawn on us, we set about learning to love. Day after day, year after year, we struggled but pressed on. We learned to put our own agendas aside, to believe in each other, to see each other as more important than ourselves. As I looked with new eyes at the extent of God's love for me, this understanding slowly transformed my heart toward Todd. Our marriage is still a work in progress, but God is teaching us how to build a house of love.
