The Amazon Basin, rich in minerals, fascinating~ yet forbidding in its mystery, has over the centuries attracted the dregs of civilisation. With their superior technology and unhampered by moral considerations, they have brought miserable death to the free, uncompromising and difficult-to pacify Indians who live there. Tribe after tribe, with no desire to accept an alien authority or to adapt to an alien culture, has been reduced to pitiful remnants or exterminated completely.

Lucien Bodard, is a well-known French journalist. This is the vivid account of his own investigation of the continuous human tragedy of the Amazon Basin. He tells of his own encounters with a wide spectrum of humanity in the cities and the jungles of Brazil. He tells of sickening cruelty, cynical exploitation and of bureaucratic indifference, incompetence and outright corruption. His skilful prose re-creates the horrific actuality of the results of centuries of bloodshed in the oppressive, dehumanising atmosphere of the green hell .
