Enchantingly attractive Katherine Phenwick had two companions when she left her girlhood New England home for the romance and intrigue of turn-of-the-century aristocratic

England.

One was Lanny Thomas, the beautiful and mysterious mulatto girl hired to ease Katherine's loneliness in a foreign land, and to offer the counsel Katherine so often desperately needed in this world of sophisticated pleasures and perilous temptations.

But Katherine's other companion was closer and more constant still--a companion whose existence no one else suspected, and whose growing presence within her Katherine could not deny or escape., the legendary Augusta Phenwick, lusting anew for all of life and the limits of love
