A spiritual master leads men on an inner journey to find their True Self.

The great stories and myths have much to teach today's men and women. For most men, none are more rewarding than the ancient Arthurian legends of the lives of knights dedicated to the search for the Holy Grail. At their core these stories invite men to move outside comfortable boundaries and to risk a much greater calling: nothing less than the discovery of the true self.

The starting point for many men is the receiving of a "sacred wound": a death, a betrayal, some grievous loss. Learning to accept and understand the significance of these life events is important, for from this wound can come healing for self and others

As Richard Rohr puts it: "The work of religion is to open your eyes and see that everything swirls with meaning. "
