When a properly brought up, somewhat inhibited, strong-minded girl is suddenly thrust into the bizarre, strangely threatening world of actors, her life begins to change in ways to match her new surroundings.

Alison Howard, researching the life of the now dead playwright Lionel Vail, finds herself in a Connecticut town where the Vail family is reopening its small private theater to smolder stock. Also reopened are some mysteries of the past and the present, along with some ominous questions that could affect Alison's future: Did Lionel Vail commit suicide? Why did he leave such a strange suicide note? If, indeed, it was a suicide note. What happened to the manuscript of the play he had finished just before he died? Before these questions are answered-and some puzzles solved concerning the visiting actors and Vail family relationships-Alison is dealt her full share of danger, fear, glamour, and love.

The House is Dark is a fine tale of romantic suspense in a colorful contemporary setting.
