"What did I do wrong?" my friend asked me. Her distressed phone call came during a time of painful crisis. "If God would just tell me what he wants, I d do it. Is he trying to teach me something? Ifl only knew what he wanted...."

I understood her struggle. Many times in my walk with the Lord, I ve experienced the same guessing game. You live a good life, you do what's right, you try to understand and do God's will, and then In the life of every man or woman of faith, there are times and experiences that force us to ask, "What does God want from me anyway?"

In the beginning, when we first turn our lives over to God's care and direction, we experience a new excitement about life. Things are going to be different---clearer, more full of purpose and meaning. When we experience the forgiveness from sin that comes with new faith in Christ, we're eager to please God. Later, many of us experience an even deeper hunger to understand God. Is there something more he wants from us? We want to know him, to cooperate with his will for us. Maybe
