Mexico 7S twentieth century has been one of dramatic upheaval violence?chaos t growth?and change I inexplicably acted out against a backdrop of frozen traditional values and ancient American historyThe contradictory worlds of ancient and modern Mexico are often expressed through seemingly endless conflicting forces Thus it is that the peasant confronts the landlordsubsistence agriculture loses out to commercial farmingtraditionalism struggles with modernism in art and politicsthe indigenous East does battle with the modern Westcommunalism faces capitalism rural Mexico undergoes Urbanizationand Mexicanos love and hate the gringo Colossus of the NorthThese contradictions and con flicts are expressed daily by MexicansOn the one handMarxist pundits speak of repression?pharaohism?corruption?pollution and povertyThey call for revolution On the other hand bureaucrats speak of justice democracy honesty cleanliness and the economic miracle A contemporary style of double speak is officially adopted and the call is for a continuation of the institutionalized revolution So it is that Mexico's so-called revolutionary tradition embraces past and future The PRI that is the Partido Revolucionario Institucional which dominates Mexico's political landscape is the modernizing agency that has left Mexico both traditional and modern a PRI-modern nation Contemporary Mexico reflects the many strains of a people in transition what historians view as a struggle and dialogue between past and present while these contradictions may seem abstract to outsiders they can be understood in concrete and human terms For example nine basic foodstuffs including meat and beans underwent a 100 percent price increase in only twelve days in January 1984 Tortillas then at the official price of 155 pesos were selling in the tortillerias
