Hometown is a distinctly American place inhabited by all of us—and now it is captured in an important new book by the celebrated producer of the prize-winning films Hearts and Minds and The Selling of the American Girl and the six-part PBS series Middletown. Peter Davis's stunning literary debut recreates the aspirations of a typical American community and the passions of its confrontations between men and women—rich and poor—workers and bosses—victims and victimizers. And Hometown's eye-opening climax reveals a town finally forced to confront the hidden sources of its attitudes and beliefs. In the tradition of Our Town and Winesburg, Ohio, Hometown evokes in us a profound appreciation of who we are as a people.
