I LAFAYETTE STREET
The debonair Doubleï¼Œ a light mac over his armï¼Œ and with a traveling bag all of whose pouches say Goodbyeï¼Œ walks across the jet~4ay into the plane. His semblance walks with him. It s odd two look-alikes should look so different.
Who hands over the boarding pass? Who sits at the cabin window as Levant softens into Aegeanï¼Œ Aegean winces into North? I... who? Now we hover above Londonï¼Œ that place of contraction on the globe. Semblance sighs. It s that sulky place where he began. (For English sulks in a night-tent in London. Asthmatic poetï¼Œ advised the Dou-bleï¼Œ you need the easy breath of the Levant.) Helicopter bladeï¼Œ serious revolving brow of thoughtï¼Œ above parceled-out English fields glad to expire so wanly.
A frittering mind revolves m worry-cloud
and barrios itself at London.
