A FAMILY! WHAT S THAT?
My husband and I were sitting in a quaint little lakeside restaurant in Lucerne Switzerland. The setting sun was casting e colorful path across the glassy lake. Two swans glided smoothly across the blue surface which mirrored the purple mountains encircling it. Inside the warm glow of lamps gave a homey atmosphere which was highlighted by friendly conversations overheard from neighboring tables. A few feet from us a large tame was expectant of a special party. Places were set for at least twelve persons. Fresh flowers adorned the very center. Soon they came--an old a middle-aged and a young couple. It was obvious that this was a family party.
Was it a birthday for the mother and grandmother? We understood very little of the German language but we did understand the love and joy that flowed from that corner of the room for the remainder of the evening. We found ourselves rejoicing with them when laughter interrupted our conversation.
And though they were complete strangers we felt a warm bond with their affection, admiration and oneness with each other.
