They start to arrive at the United Air Lines terminal at Kennedy Airport around noon—the men in sport shirts and sport jackets; the women favoring almost exclusively—pants suits. The matched—unscuffed luggage—not to men—the proliferation of golf clubs—marks them as people of—means. Except for them—the terminal is all but empty. This is the special junket charter to Las Vegas. Behind the check-in-counter—slouched in indolent ease—is Big Julie Weintraub—the ringmaster of these revels. He is a big man—six-foot-five—with a slight break across the bridge of his nose that gives him the look of an amiable ex-fighter. As the junketeers sign in—the greetings are warm and effusive and full of expectation. With the men it is the gambler's mixture of wild optimism and dark foreboding. With the women it is all hugging and kissing and \"sweety\"

and \"honey\" and laughter.
