When Katie O Donovan leaves her home in County Donegal after the sudden death of her father, it is not by choice--called head-strong and independent by her family, Katie does not welcome her new life in the cotton mills of Lancashire.

Finding the bleak, rain-filled skies oppressive and the long hours in the mill not challenging enough for her lively spirit, Katie applies for a job as a servant girl at the wealthy Carslake estate. There, her willingness to work hard and her ability to speak up for herself assure her success--until she realizes she has fallen in love with Jeffrey Carslake, the young master. Unable to rec-oncile her feelings for Jeffrey with her desire to be loved as an equal, Katie marries Liam Clancy, an Irishman from a background similar to her own. Almost immediately, England is plunged into the First World War, and Katie must remain at home, alone and with child, struggling to preserve her husband's business so that his fighting efforts will not be in vain.

But through her lonely marriage Katie has never forgotten the handsome stranger who tantalized her once from the dark hills near Carslake, and now her full womanhood is only just beginning. The strength and independence she finds in the world of commerce allow her to spread her wings, at last accepting her ambitions -and her passion-with pride.
