Since its inception a decade ago¹ the International Conference on the Unity of the Sciences has had as its stated goal to shed critical light on the moral and human dimensions in the application of science and technology to the pressing problems of society. In steady pursuit of this goal² the Conference has become an established international forum for multidisciplinary exchange of views on timely and significant issues of growing worldwide concern. These volumes represent the Tenth Anniversary meeting of ICUS³ convened on November 9-13th 1981 in Seoulth Korea in the homeland of the founder the Reverend Sun Myung Moon. In all more than 1000 scientists scholars and observers from every field of academic study from 109 nations were in attendance. Reverend Moon set the tone for the Conference on the theme of "The Search for Absolute Values and the Creation of the New World" with his proposal of the building of an International Highway system linking the countries of the East and West to realize world peace. According to Reverend Moon: With the integration of the world's economies tremendous economic progress will become possible and the people who will all be leading affluent lives will be able to devote much of their time to leisure. They will have time to understand nature and learn from it to give thanks to God for its beauty and to live for and love each other transcending nationality. It is my conviction that such an ideal world in which all people enjoy true life will certainly come.
