Bombs fell sirens wailed and buildings collapsed as J. B. Phillips talked about beatings stonings and shipwrecks. What first-century Christians had to endure was not unlike what twentieth-century Londoners had thrust upon them. Descriptions of the first-century experience however couched as they were in the regal English of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries were not easy for twentieth-century parishioners to understand. To remedy the situation the London vicar decided to try his hand at Englishing one of the epistles. "It's like seeing an old picture after it's been cleaned" said C. S. Lewis about the result and he urged the vicar to do
