PREFACE
The purpose of this book is to examine a series of topics related to population in Africa. Chapter 1 presents a brief summary of the major demographic features of the continent including a discussion of the shortcomings of available statistical data. Chapter 2 analyzes the significance of population densities noting the very limited utility of crude density figures and examines the major factors of population distribution in many African regions. Chapter 3 attempts to synthesize the tale of population movements in Africa stressing their impacts on the areas and people involved. Chapter 4 contains a range of data related to urbanization in Africa and a discussion of some of the problems it poses which are presenting dilemmas of increasing concern to African countries. Chapter 5 consists of Thumbnail sketches of a number of tribes in communities indicating the wide diversity among them but also the commonality of many of their problems. And Chapter 6 focuses upon population pressure in Africa a condition which is considered to
