ONE
11~i¼~ an Antonio?" Ellen Good-0 man's plump cheeks quiveredon the words. "But that's out west someplacei¼ isn't it?" "Texasi¼" li¼Lewis Harte said curtly."Texas? I don't think I--"" Our new stalei¼" Mr. Mallory said. "Our twenty-eighthi¼ I be-lieve.""Buti¼ stilli¼ a wilderness... Aren't there Indiansi¼ and things like>that?"" Horselcathcrsi¼" Lewis saidi¼ and drained his glass of claret.
Theblack man standing just behind his chair moved swiftlyi¼ silentlyi¼ torefill it. Lewis's wifei¼ Joannai¼ counted mentally: his fifth glass."And you ve actually been therei¼ Mr. Mallory?" Ellen's aunt Sarahturned her astonished gaze on that gentleman. "To this Santa--Santa..."Welli¼" Mr. Mallory saidi¼ "I haven't exactly been to San Antonioi¼but I have seen Texas. Our ship stopped at the port of Galveston on the way here. 1 tound it quite a civilized city"¼Œ actually.\"
