ONE TILE CRISIS THAT TttREATENED THE BACKBONE OF THE MONAI; chy itself had begun shortly before 6:15 a.m. on Wedne~ dayi¼E January 13i¼E \"black Wednesdayi¼E\" as the Royal Famil came to call it. A junior currency dealer in the City of Loc doni¼E the UK s financial hubi¼E paid twenty-five pounds to man on the Australian desk for the first unexpurgated trac script of the private bedtime conversation between th Prince of Wales and the forty-five-year-old wife of hi friend Andrew Parker Bowles. By 6:45i¼E people were linin up to fax the transcripts to friends and colleagues aroun the world. \"I knew that whether the British press had the will t publish them or noti¼E the transcripts had become the bi~ gest samizdat operation outside of Russiai¼E\" the junic trader would say later. \"I thoughti¼E This is the conversatici¼E that wilt stop Prince Charles becoming King. I knew that a hell was going to break loose.\" Fellowes heard the news. Fellowes is the Queen s private secretaryi¼E her closest adviseri¼E andi¼E as the husband of the former Lady Jane Spenceri¼E also the Princess of Wales s
