From Library Journal Finally a true consumers' handbook has been written, an unromanticized exploration of the products, services, personnel, and habitats relating to children. Choosing a preschool, best and worst toys by age, toll-free manufacturers' numbers, airline policies for the young, where to report child abuse, and recommendations on doctors, clothing, sitters, tax credits, and furniture are just a few of the subjects covered in this guide. While the Nader-ish approach may alarm some, the overall scope and quality of this catalog, more comprehensive than Theresa Bollinger Patricia Cramer's Baby Gear Guide (LJ 3/1/85) and far more practical than Jean Mills's Babyworks (LJ 2/1/86), make it valuable for all parents who have the desire, but not always the time, to stay well informed.
