Life at the end of this millennium is both a frightening and a awesome experience. Most of us are feeling overwhelmed by the voluminous and continuous onslaught of seemingly random data and adrift on an uneasy sea of paradox, ambiguity and division. Yet these very threats are also the signals that major cognitive transformation is at work in both our individual lives and in the development of the culture.
Using the latest cognitive theory as their basis, the authors have created a simple model that helps us understand how transformation occurs and what each of us can do to move into new and more productive levels of perception and cognitive processing.
