CHAPTER
ONE
1951
After supper on Holy Thursday evening¼ Father McCabe motioned Sean Cronin away from the black line of seminarians filing in silence out of the house chapel. "Mistah Cmnini¼" he snapped¼ "go to my office." Sean walked down the dimly lit corridor and waited¼ at the door of the disciplinarian's office¼ his heart beating rapidly. What would his father say if he were sent home in disgrace? As far as he could remember¼ he hadn't violated any rules¼ but in the atmosphere of suspicion and distrust that permeated Mundelein a sudden and final decision to expel a student could be made arbitrarily on the basis of very little evidence. When the last of the seminarians finished reporting minor infractions of the rules to Father McCabe--being late for class; not turning out lights at 9:45; violating the
