Chapter One
All through the long afternoon the ceremonial drums had been throbbing like the pulse beat of a giant heart and Liliha in the semidarkness of the thatched hut felt her own blood surging to the drumbeat. Her hair and body had been sleeked by scented oils in preparation for the honor that was soon to be hers. Nothing remained save for the donning of the new kapa cloth which her mother Akakii had made specially for the occasion. After the ministrations of her mother and the other women Liliha felt beautiful and more alive than she had ever felt. She moved her head gently from side to side enjoying the feel of her hip-length silken black hair as it moved across her bare golden skin. Her nostrils widened as the tempting odors of roasting pig seeped into the hut. Since she was a woman¼Œ Liliha would not be partaking of the succulent meat-as she would not be able to eat of the white shark meat or the >| bananas--for these foods were kapiti¼Œ forbidden¼Œ to women.
