When Walter Hadley, owner of the store, proposed marriage to Susan, it seemed that her dream had come true. Though he was older, Walter was handsome, sophisticated, kind, "I can learn to love him, " Susan thought to herself. And when goodlooking young Dr. Peter Harrison told her brutally that she was throwing her life away, Susan was shocked and angry. It took a shattering medical emergency to force Susan to decide what kind of nurse and woman she really was
