From Booklist St. Martin's is touting this guide as "Mondo 2000 meets the Whole Earth Catalog"--not a bad characterization of a volume that crosses the WEC's "Access to Tools" utility with Mondo's cutting-edge approach. It's a selective but aware compilation of the new "alternative" media: books (from cyberpunk fiction to the Psychedelics Encyclopedia), zines (from Future Sex to Women & Guns plus a scattering of on-line zines on computer bulletin board systems), music (of the "indy, " "new, " and "world" varieties), video (from underground films to noncommercial documentaries), and (playing up the Whole Earth connection) "Tools for Living, " including resources on tattooing, guides to sex toys and smart drugs, and bizarre software and wearable computers. Although some of the entries aren't as "out there" as they might be (many of the books and CDs are from mainstream publishers and labels, available even in mall stores), many others usefully introduce examples of personal creativity made possible by PCs, photocopiers, camcorders, and digital samplers. It's impossible to imagine that any interested reader won't want to track down something from this collection, and Kadrey lists mail-order resources to make that easier. Gordon Flagg
