warily to the base of a wall that rose until the fog swallowed it; his chameleon-web bodysuit mocked the opaline mist until he was a pale shade in the shadows. He touched his belt and >a circle of light sprang into being under his feet. Another touch. Like a soap bubble he drifted silently up along the flickering force-fields surfacing the wall with the fog ceiling retreating above his head and closing in again under his feet as he slid silently upward. Muffled sounds¼Œ broken and anonymous¼Œ slipped past him¼Œ too natural and arrhythmic to trigger taut nerves.

The wall broke suddenly into a wide plane-surfaced top¼Œ but he kept rising until his feet were a handspan above the edge¼Œ then he touched the belt again and began drifting sideways

smooth and silent in his milky room of fog..
