The Early Years
 Jimmy and I grew up three years and three miles apart¼ he on a farm in the \"country¼\" and I¼ along with my two younger brothers¼ Jerry and Murray¼ and my much younger sister¼ Allethea¼ in a simple white frame house in the middle of Plains. The red clay soil is very fertile in southern Georgia¼ and my mother grew it zinnias¼ petunias¼ hollyhocks¼ crepe myrtle¼ and what seemed like ~¼ hundreds of other flowers in carefully tended beds on the street ~ide of our house; the back yard held Our vegetable garden a~d lots of trees--fig¼ pear¼ pecan and wild cherry¼ and pomegranate bushes and a scuppernong arbor. I remember very well that we had rosebushes too¼ because once I fell out of the sitting room >window and landed in one of them. I still have the scar on my >chin to remind me.

 Our back yard seemed enormous. At its edge was a woodpile for the cook stove and coal for burning in the fireplaces. There was a smokehouse
a chicken house filled with chickens ~nd at one time a rabbit pen though we finally had to get rid of the rabbits because they kept multiplying and we ran out of room for them. We also had a barn for the milk cow and a few pigs and another barn for the mules my father used on our nearby farm.
Behind the barns was someone else's field. Every spring the rains >formed a pond in it and we could hear the loud chirping of the frogs from our po~ch at night.
 Dust was a prominent part of our life. Billows of red dust >engulfed us every time
